Excerpt from Vaccination: A Report Read Before the American Social Science Association, at New York, October 27, 1869 The cow-pox is not a contagious disease, like the inoculated small-pox, yet there is good reason for believing that the cow-pox, whether in man or in the lower animals, is really the small - pox, deprived of its virulence and its capacity for transmission through the air.* If ever theory was proved by fact, this has been; for actual inoculation of cows with small-pox matter has been frequently resorted to, with the effect of generating the cow-pox pure and simple. Moreover, lymph from the cow-pox thus produced has been used in vaccinating tens of thousands of children, and has proved perfectly satisfactory in every respect, acting precisely like lymph from the spontaneous cow - pox, and furnishing efficient protection against the small-pox. As a rule, cow-pox can only be had once by the same person. There are several eruptions, to which cows, horses, and some other animals are subject, which resemble the genuine cow pox; such as in horses the grease, once erroneously thought to be the origin of the disease in cows. Genuine horse-pox furnishes the means for successful inoculation, like genuine cow-pox, and is equally protective.
