Excerpt from Xviith International Congress Of Medicine, London, 1913: Abstracts Of Reports Joints which come for treatment in a position of contrae ture should be at once treated by plaster dressings and got back into position by stages. The most important agent in the local treatment is the complete fixation by means of bandages or apparatus that cannot be removed. TO this is added in the case of the spinal column the supine position, and in the case of the lower limbs the removal of the weight of the body. Illustrations are given. In general treatment Bollinger lays stress on sun rays, the application of which is critically described. This treatment, together with Roentgen therapy, has markedly diminished the boundaries of operative procedure. The Mechanical Treatment of Hip Disease. Abstract of Report by Dr. John ridlon, Chicago. By hip disease is meant any chronic in?ammation of the hip joint that is not differentiated from tuberculosis, and that left untreated results in more or less diminished range of motion at the joint, with usually some deformity and frequently shortened limb. All cases of hip...
